Curated Program of Films from the International Video Art Festival of Camagüey (FIVAC)

This curated program is an insight into the Cuban reality as seen through the lens of 20 short films from the last 15 years, where creators discourse on diversity and from diverse standpoints. There are so many traps and believes gravitating around this peculiar country, that it is nearly impossible to emerge unscathed from the struggle to understand it. Cuban reality does not exist in the form of this undivided anatomy that Tyrians and Trojans claim to live in. Cuba reality is a shattered mirror, and the pointed, sharp shards pierce the eyes and the understanding of those who stand in front of it. Cuban reality takes pride in having a strict zero-guns policy but has countless young people plucking their roots out of the island; Cuban reality's daily life is bleeding out, but its healthcare force offers free open-heart transplants; Cuban reality wants to build socialism, but it is not willing to take on the risks of dissent.

One wonders, does Cuba exist?

Yes, it does, but not in the comfortable and complacent way with which it often sculpts itself and exhibits its surface; it exists in the continued ripping of its guts, as if giving birth in pain to every single day was its only salvation.

That's what this curated program is about...
